Valser moderato

Andante moderato

To ev'ry one beneath the sun, God sends his blessings down, Like through life we go and never know what future years may hold.

The dew they fall upon us all, in ev'ry home they're found, To skies of gray may fade away and some day turn to gold.

So some a name, to others fame, His gifts are ev'ry where, The don't complain there's naught to gain, just learn to live and love.

poor man and the rich a like, will both receive their share.
all must wait to learn our fate, and trust to Him above.

CHORUS
Valse moderato

God gives the wise men their wisdom, sends all the poets their dreams.

father and mother their love for each other we all get a share, so it seems.

I thought that I was forgotten, My life was an empty affair.

But He thought of me too, and when God gave me you, I know I get more than my share.
