fair young form: he holds her hands And swears that ev'ry more fond heart bleeds, as swift she reads A note, with tear-stained eye: "I've worship her, and some day she Shall be his own, his bride, But gone with Nell, good bye, fare-well! Don't grieve for me, or fret. Just soon he's gone, she's left forlorn For-saken cast aside.

think of Ned, as one who's dead For-give, dear and for-get?"
That's how hearts are broken, That's how lives are crossed;

Futures bright wrecked in a night, Both soul and body lost!

That's how hearts are broken Ah, the cruel pain; For once the heart is rent apart It ne'er will mend again!
