When The Sunshine In Your Heart
Turns Night-Time Into Day.

Words by ARTHUR LONGBRAKE.

Music by
JACKSON PEABODY Jr.

Andante affectuoso.

You say the sun would cease to shine
If
You say the murmur of the brook
Would

I were far away from you,
That all the joys of earth cease to breathe sweet melody,
The joys pervading ev'ry

bined nook
Would fail to pierce the darkness through;
The
Would lose their charm that used to be;
The

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada in the year MCMVIII, by Joseph Morris at the Department of Agriculture. bird's sweet song would seem all wrong, The rose that you love never bloom, An stars that shine would seem to pine, The dew fall as tear-drops from the fair, Sweet-heart when night seems long, When doubt and fear grow strong, And sky, Sweet-heart when you are mine, The same true love you'll find When rit With fervour gloom has cast its shad-ows ev'ry where. I've re-turned in that sweet bye and bye. Let the sun-shine in your heart turn night-time in to

When The Sunshine, etc. 0
I day And the rays of love-light shining keep the gathering clouds away, Then the love of which you dream from your own sweet face will beam, When the sunshine in your heart turns night-time into day.

When The Sunshine, etc. 3