VAMPING ROSE.
A Yiddish Song Fox - Trot.

Written by
BERT HANLON and BEN RYAN.

Composed by VIOLINSKY and IRA SCHUSTER.

Copyright 1921, by Leo Feist, Inc. Feist Building, New York.
F. & D. 15890.
1. There's a certain
2. What a voice for girlie, She's a Ghetto queen, singing! From her mouth it flows.

Cohen's daughter, have you caught her, Dress'd up all serv-
Mary Garden, beg your pardon, She can't sing like rene? How she grabs the fellows,
Rose. When it comes to Op'ra,

When she meets them out! You can't help taking
She learns ev'ry part. Have you seen Tetrazzini?

Some-one's sure to shout,
Rose knows that by heart.

F. & D. 15890.
CHORUS. 2nd time f

"Vamp-ing Rose, there she goes, in her fan-cy clothes!" — Good-ness Vamp-ing Rose, there she goes, in her fan-cy clothes! — And her me! can it be? My, what class she shows! — When she shoes, num-ber twos, how they pinch her toes! — She's got flits to the Ritz, where she sits and sits, — Not a bit like the style, and a smile you can see a mile, — For it shows off her

Mile End Road (where the gher-kins come from). Jew'l'ry she'll bright gold teeth (so she's al-ways smil-ing). She says that

F. & D. 15890.
Lights are there

She just tears it apart.

Wear that's beyond compare.

Looks all right late at night when the lights are there.

She knows the Prince quite well.

She don't care for a course! Prince of Wales Hotel.

Knows the Prince? Why, of course! Prince of Wales Hotel.

She's got rouge on her heart. She just tears it apart.

That's why they call her cheeks, it's been on there for weeks.